The Internet is an open network accessible by everyone and is therefore not a secure environment. Although the individual data packages are always transmitted encrypted this is not the case for the sender and receiver. It is also possible for the data to be transferred to another country and therefore, with certainty, to a country with a lower data protection level than Switzerland, even when the sender and receiver are both in Switzerland. Therefore MGB cannot be held liable for the security of data while its is being transmitted over the Internet.

Gathering and using information

Through access to the portal, various access data is stored (for example IP address, date and time of the access, name of the called up file etc.).

No personal evaluations take place. The data is processed anonymously for statistical purposes, for example to establish how many accesses to the portal occurred on a particular day.

This data is handled as strictly confidential and is not passed on to or made accessible to any third party outside the Migros Group, except in cases where this is required under current legislation and by name by the responsible criminal prosecuting authorities.
